

Population health: Microeconomic and Macroeconomic Effects.

October 9th - 10th, 2025.

Call for Papers: Annual Network Congress 2025

The Faculty of Economic, Business, and Accounting Sciences of the Universidad Libre de Pereira and Network of Researchers in Economics of the Central Bank of Colombia are pleased to invite you to participate in the call for papers for the Network of Researchers in Economics 2025, titled "Population Health: Microeconomic and Macroeconomic Effects."

The Congress will be held in the city of Pereira, Colombia on October 9 – 10, 2025 and will focus on various study topics within the field of health economics. We invite national and international researchers to submit papers on topics such as health insurance, economic impacts of health shocks (such as chronic and mental illnesses), health system financing, innovations in service provision, human resources in the sector, and population aging, as well as the macroeconomic effects of these aspects, among others. Each author may submit only one paper, although they may participate in the conference with more than one paper through co-authorships.

The conference will bring together academics, experts, young researchers, professionals, and policymakers to present and discuss research related to health economics and its applications in public policy design. We will have the participation of renowned international panelists, such as Rudi Rocha (Fundação Getulio Vargas), Marcos Vera (University College London) and Jonathan Skinner (Dartmouth College), among others.

To submit a paper, please fill the form available here.

Submission deadline: July 14, 2025
